FileYourTaxes.com Announces the Beginning of 2008 Tax Season

FileYourTaxes.com announced that they will be officially accepting returns by January 11, 2008, the same date that the Internal Revenue Service (IRS) will also be heralding the 2008 tax season for all calendar year taxpayers that will be filing their 2007 year tax returns.

Due to the late passage of the Alternative Minimum Tax patch by the Congress, IRS will not be able to accept certain returns, whether filed electronically or on paper. These include returns with any of the following five forms, Education Credits, Residential Energy Credits, Child and Dependent Care Expenses for Form 1040A Filers (Schedule 2), Mortgage Interest Credit, District of Columbia First-Time Homebuyer Credit until the stated date of February 11, 2008.

Atilla Taluy said “FileYourTaxes.com is ready to assist all taxpayers. To this end, those who are effected by the Schedule 2 can easily switch to “long form – 1040” through our system and get their refunds early. This option we offer will benefit approximately 1 Million taxpayers.

Regarding the other delayed forms; we will offer three options to the taxpayers. First, they can still enter their return information and we will hold such returns until the IRS tells us it is OK to file them. Second, they can file the returns without the effected forms and then amend them on our website. Third, we will provide a paper return for them and they can mail the return when the IRS is ready to process the effected returns. I want to emphasize that paper returns will not be processed any earlier then the electronically filed returns, as a matter of fact, the refunds historically arrive later if a return is filed on paper.”

Atilla continued, “FileYourTaxes.com has been an original member of the Free File Alliance, LLC (FFA) and each tax season for six years contributes free Federal tax return construction and eFiling to many taxpayers. This year we have extended our offer to cover a greater number of states, based on popular demand, FFA filings will commence coincident with the start of the IRS filing season.”

FileYourTaxes.com is ready serve the vast number of repeat users as well as the new ones that will find the comprehensive, newly redesigned and easy to use tax system developed specifically for the Online taxpayers, continuously and vigilantly protecting the privacy and the security of their data and Online relationship with all of the tax agencies of their choice.

Atilla closed saying, “Again, this season, we look forward to serving all American taxpayers securely at www.FileYourTaxes.com , 24/7, regardless of where they live.”
