FileYourTaxes.com Announces the Beginning of 2010 Tax Season

FileYourTaxes.com announced that they will be officially accepting returns today, January 15, 2010, coincident with the date that the Internal Revenue Service (IRS) heralds the 2010 tax season for all calendar year taxpayers that will be filing their 2009 year tax returns. Due to the late law passage changes, IRS will not be able to accept certain forms at the beginning of the season.

Atila Taluy said “FileYourTaxes.com is ready to provide the benefits tax laws and regulations. The Earned Income Credit is more comprehensive than ever before, providing additional benefits up to the third child. In the past this credit was limited to two children. The Child Tax Credit was also extended to cover greater number of taxpayers. These and other credits made available through American Recovery and Reinvestment Act will greatly benefit the American taxpayers. However, the tax returns containing the newly extended homebuyer credit will be fileable only on paper due the requirements of additional documentation. The refunds should be greater this year to benefit the most deserving taxpayers in these dire economic times.”

Timur Taluy added that “The ProTaxPro.com division of FileYourTaxes.com will be assisting the preparer community in the same easy and extensive manner. This product will be a valuable asset to any preparer in light of the new IRS initiative to register and educate the tax professionals by providing easily understandable guidance in the return preparation process. Both of the products will feature Refund Settlement Products.”

Timur continued saying “The same, full FileYourTaxes.com product is also made available, at no cost to qualified federal return files through the Free File Alliance, LLC (FFA). This product offered is not an abridged version of the software as may be case with other companies. FileYourTaxes.com, as charter member of FFA, has been providing this fine service for eight consecutive years. We will begin to serve the taxpayers via the FFA same day the IRS begins the 2010 tax season.

FileYourTaxes.com, as usual is, committed to continuously and vigilantly protecting the privacy and the security of the data and Online relationship with all of the tax agencies of the taxpayers' choice.”

Atila closed saying, “Again, this season, we look forward to serving all American taxpayers 24/7, efficiently, securely at www.FileYourTaxes.com .”
